

Peer Review of Fellow Group Mates, by Shashank Heda, 11110094

Ravi Kumar: Ravi contributed greatly working not only with our group but with all the groups. He sorted all our problems related to HPC. Every time we had problems with managing files or syntax related problems to be debugged in shell file, the first thing that came to my mind was Ravi. He worked really hard and always kept exploring new features for our projects. In the initial phase, when we were not confident about presentation, he boosted us morally. I spent many sleepless nights with him writing and debugging the code to be able to present during Friday Lab.

Nishant Rao: Always preferred to work at nights and managed his time quite efficiently. Work distribution was managed nicely by him.

If asked for Mendelbrot and if unable to complete, he would do the analysis for Julia. So in a way, he added value to our team doing many new things. He helped with his active contribution in the team and has been good at presentation, writing codes, manipulating them, finding them and putting them to proper use.

Parth Gudhka: Preferred to stay at home most of the times and did many of the parts mainly relating to execution of the program. Was good at extracting data. He is enthusiastic and was always open for any work to be assigned. He also used to try out many new things which would not be part of the Computational Project.
